SPECIAL ADVISORY BOARDS

Constitution and Powers

The statutes of 1928 empowered the Senate to create Special Advisory Boards 'where, in the opinion of the senate, a suitable Board of Faculty or Boards of Studies cannot be constituted'. (1) They were assigned the duties of the Faculty Boards and Boards of Studies in that Subject. (2) The Special Advisory Boards were abolished as part of the constitutional changes of 1968 and replaced by Special Advisory Committees (q.v.) but it should be noted that several Special Advisory Boards were 'promoted' to Boards of Studies. For further details see AC8.

Records of the Special Advisory Boards

Records of the Special Advisory Boards include Minutes, Agendas and Related Papers and Correspondence files cover all aspects of the Boards' work.

Until 1953 there were two separate special advisory boards concerned with the subjects of dietetics, nutrition and household science: the Special Advisory Board for the Academic Postgraduate Diploma in Dietetics (established in November 1935) and the Special Advisory Board in Household and Social Science (established in February 1948). These were discharged by the Senate on 16 December 1953 and replaced by the Special Advisory Board in Dietetics, Nutrition and Household Science. AC10 SPECIAL ADVISORY COMMITTEES

Constitution and Powers

The Special Advisory Committees were created in 1968 (1) to replace the Special Advisory Boards (q.v.). The duties of the Special Advisory Boards, namely to provide consultation with the schools on matters of common academic interest, together with those of the Boards of Studies (q.v.) in the areas where in the opinion of the Senate a suitable Academic Advisory Board or Board of Studies cannot be instituted.

A Special Advisory Committee was only established for a limited period which was then renewed after three or five years. Therefore their role and connection with the Academic Council was reviewed regularly.

Documents submitted by the Academic Council to the Strategic Issues Group in December 1989 and May 1990 showed the need for reform in the operation of the Federal University. Following this as a result of the Report of the Strategic Issues Group (SIG) in April 1991, on which the constitutional reforms are based, Boards of Studies, Special Advisory Committees and Academic Advisory Boards ceased to exist in September 1994.(2) These were replaced by a new Committee consisting of a University Council, Academic Committee and approximately six subject Area Groups (excluding Medicine) to which all Teachers of the University would be allocated. (3)

Following this the new constitutional machinery provided for in the Statutes, which includes a Council, an Executive Committee of the Council, an Academic Committee, a Medical Committee and Subject Area Boards, was put in place between 1994-1995.

Records of the Special Advisory Boards

Records of the Special Advisory Boards include Minutes, Agendas and Related Papers and Correspondence files cover all aspects of the Boards' work.

AC 11 Overseas Colleges in Special Relationship:
Introductory Note

The Asquith Commission (1) recommended the establishment of university colleges in colonies which in due course would be raised to the status of universities. The scheme of Special Relationship was created to undertake this task. The main objectives of the scheme were that while in Special Relationship the colleges should be able to prepare students for degrees, and that the teachers of the colleges should play a part in designing the courses, setting examinations and marking scripts, while at the same time the staff would be able to obtain help and advice from the University of London.

Colleges in Special Relationship were autonomous bodies with the exception of departments offering degrees in medicine and veterinary education. Being registerable qualifications the x faculties concerned were subject to inspection by the University. The scheme of Special Relationship was directed by the Senate Committee on Higher Education in the Colonies and its successors (see ST 4/9). Although the students examined under Special Relationship regulations counted as External Students, the Secretary of the Committee was always a member of the Academic Department under the authority of the Academic Registrar. The scheme ended in 1970.

From 1958 the University also co-operated with Michigan State University in assisting the development of the University of Nigeria at Nsukka. Although this was not a formal scheme of special relationship the files relating to it are listed in AC 11 along with Special Relationship material. The scheme at Nsukka did not survive the Biafran War and was terminated in 1968.

The history and development of the scheme was described by Professor Bruce Pattison in Special Relations : The University of London and new universities overseas, 1947-1970, (2) a copy of which is available in the University of London Collection (ULC 42/1).

The material listed here was used by Professor Pattison before it had been passed to the archives in the library although its transfer was anticipated in his footnotes to specific items which he describes as being, simply, "in University Archive". These footnotes have, in the copy mentioned above (ULC 42/1), been annotated with the appropriate archive references.

The material in this list was artificially contrived and it does not necessarily reflect the original administrative arrangement. It was selected by H. G. Chubb, Secretary of the Senate Committee for International Relations in Higher Education 1966-1979, and an annotated copy of his list can be found at AC 11/18.

Chubb's original arrangement has been followed in the current list except in AC 11/1/1-23 where it was necessary to allocate new archive references. Former references have, however, been indicated in each case.
